Finding the right college

If you're looking for the college that's right for you, we can help.

As you begin your college search, you join an increasingly large number of New York state high school graduates seeking a college education. There is little doubt that a college education is more essential than ever. According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, two in every five jobs created in the coming decade will require a college degree. (In 2000, less than one-third of jobs required higher education.)

When you consider colleges to attend, think about the kind of learning environment you want, and the value of your future degree. At New York's private colleges and universities, you'll benefit from your contacts with world-class faculty and alumni; you'll have opportunities to gain real-life experience; and you'll enjoy the pleasure of forming personal relationships with professors who come to know you, your interests and your talents.

Collectively, New York's private colleges and universities continue to increase access and educate students from all income and demographic groups. We strive to enable students to attend the college of their choice and help New York State stretch its higher education dollar. Our campuses are attracting more students of color: one in four enrolled students is African-American, Asian, or Hispanic, nearly double the percentage enrolled in 1980.

It is important to know that there is assistance available to help meet college expenses. Currently, seven out of every 10 full-time students receive financial assistance. And, each year, New York's Independent Sector devotes nearly $1.7 billion to scholarships and grants for students.

I urge you to explore all your options, ask lots of questions, and visit campuses. You are sure to find the New York private college or university that's right for you.

With best wishes to you,

Abraham M. Lackman
President

The information listed is intended as a general profile of each campus - check with an admission counselor for further detailed information. Campus Profile information was current as of March 2004. While we make every effort to ensure accuracy, always verify information with the colleges directly.

College Terminology

Annual College Costs - includes tuition, fees, room, board, books, transportation, and personal expenses. These costs vary from college to college.

Associate - degree awarded on completion of a 2-year (usually) program of study.

Bachelor's - [baccalaureate] degree awarded on completion of a 4-year (usually) program of study.

Common Application - a number of colleges accept the same application, called the Common Application. Check with the college.

Early Action - a non-binding early application process allowing students to learn the admission decision before the official candidate notification date.

Early Decision - a binding early commitment process where students are notified of acceptance and are expected to commit to enrollment before regular applicants.

Financial Aid - aid to assist in meeting college costs which may be in the form of grants, scholarships, loans, or work-study. Always meet these application deadlines. See insert pages for more information about financial aid.

First Professional - a course of study culminating in a degree and license in a profession such as law, medicine, etc.

Graduate and Professional Students - those working toward a master's, doctorate, post-graduate certificate, or professional license.

Interview - a conversation with a college admission or faculty representative, or alumni.

Master's and Doctorates - advanced degrees awarded for completion of additional study beyond a bachelor's (4-year) degree.

Recommendation - a written assessment of the student's aptitudes, abilities and interests written by a teacher, counselor, coach, etc.

Rolling Admission - an institution reviews applications as they are received and offers a decision to students as applications are reviewed.

Room and Board - college housing and meal plans (often several options are available).

SAT I and the ACT - standardized tests that measure verbal and math proficiency that colleges use to predict the likelihood of a student's success in a college.

SAT II's - subject-specific exams required by many colleges (e.g. English [writing], math [IC or IIC], physics, chemistry).

Undergraduate Student - one working toward a 2-year (associate) or a 4-year (bachelor's) degree.

What to Look for in a College

If you're looking for quality and value, you'll find it at New York's private colleges and universities.

Colleges are as individual as people. Campus environments differ. Each college or university has a distinct personality. The private colleges and universities found in every region of New York state offer you some wonderful choices. Some are urban. Others are rural. Some are large, some small. But they share common ground: they all provide quality and excellent value for your investment.

Quality. Value. They're important concepts, but what do they mean in practical terms?

Quality.

The quality of your college degree matters to you and your learning experience, and it matters in the job market. And, because the college you choose will shape your future, you will want to choose carefully.

With a college degree, you can expect to earn more over your working life. Lifetime earnings are higher, on average, than for those with a high school degree alone – 33% or $400,000 more with an associate degree and 75% or $900,000 more with a bachelor's degree.

With scholarships and other aid money, private colleges are often no more expensive – and sometimes less costly – than state colleges.

While New York's private colleges and universities offer different programs and features, all are high-quality institutions that provide students important benefits.

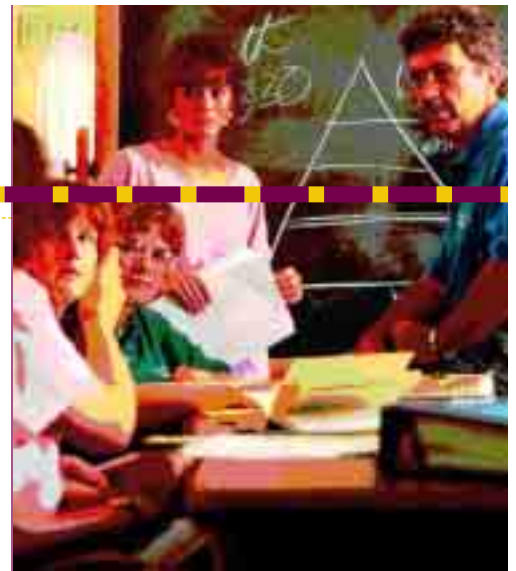

These are some of the features you should consider in a college:

- Strong academic departments.
- Small class size.
- Low student-to-teacher ratios.
- World-class, dedicated faculty.
- Opportunity for activities outside the classroom.
- Teaching that inspires critical thinking.
- For certain academic majors, look for research opportunities, internship programs or study abroad.
- Outstanding career placement services.

Value.

When you choose your college, think about the kind of learning environment you want, and the value of your future degree. At New York's private colleges and universities, you'll benefit from your contacts with well-known faculty and alumni; you'll have opportunities to gain real-life experience; and you'll enjoy the pleasure of forming personal relationships with professors who come to know you, your interests and your talents.

One more thing: never exclude colleges because of the "sticker price." You may be surprised at how much financial aid is available and, with aid packages, you may find that private colleges are no more expensive – and sometimes less costly – than state colleges. (See the insert pages for more on financial aid.)

What a college looks for in its students.

When you're searching for the right college, there are at least two things to consider: what you want in a college, and what the college wants in you.

By starting early, you'll have time to make the best match. Think about your strengths, and the qualities you will bring to the college.

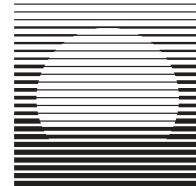

Here are some qualities colleges look for in their applicants.

- Academic preparation.
- Challenging coursework.
- High marks in a range of courses.
- Ranking among high school peers, including senior year ranking.
- SAT or ACT scores.
- Extracurricular activities (commitment, rather than quantity, is the key).
- Recommendations from teachers and others.
- Written self-expression, often judged by your application essay.
- Verbal expression and presentation.
- Leadership ability and positions.
- Level of interest in and enthusiasm for the college.
